THE TURTLE AND THE SWAN

There was once a lake in a green valley surrounded by blue hills and forests. In it lived a kindly old turtle. He was friendly with all the animals, for he was a great talker! His best friend was a pair of beautiful swans. Life went on peacefully in the valley from season to season.

Then, one year, something terrible happened; the rains failed and the lake began to dry up. Soon, the lake was the size of a dirty, brown puddle.

'We are leaving in the morning,' said the swans.

'We're off to the great lake. We're sorry you can't fly, otherwise you could come with us.'

'Well', cried the turtle, ' I shall say goodbye then.... forever. I won't be here when you return as I shall die of thirst.'

The swans were sad. They wanted to help the turtle. But he could not fly.

The turtle said: ' Perhaps you could carry me?'

'Not possible! You are too heavy.' said the first swan.

'And even if one of us could lift you, you would fall off', said the second swan.

'You two could hold onto a stiff stick and I could grip the middle.' said the turtle.

'There's no harm in trying. But you cannot talk or you will go crashing down to earth.' said the first swan.

The swans took hold of either end of the stick, and the turtle locked his jaws onto the middle. The swans flapped their wings and rose up into the air.

'It works!' thought the turtle.

'What a clever old turtle I am!'

They flew for many miles. They passed through many villages and towns. They could see people working on the fields. The turtle had never seen people before so he wanted to talk to them. But he would remember that he should not open his mouth.

Soon they came to a small town. The people below noticed the strange sight.

'Look up there!' shouted a woman. 'Two clever swans are carrying a turtle on a stick,' explained the woman.

'What clever birds!', said the man.

The turtle became cross. 'Stupid people!', he thought.

The turtle forgot where he was and what was he supposed to be doing. He opened his mouth and shouted: 'Silly people.... This was my ideaaah...'

But he could not finish the sentence.
