COMPREHENSION

Read the comprehension passage given below and answer the following questions.

THE FRAID

Once upon a time on that hot green island of Jamaica, where monkeys live in the trees, there lived a little girl named Sue, with her mother. One day Sue asked her mother, if she could go down the road and play with the little boy who lives there.

‘Yes,’ said her mother, ‘but mind you come back before its dark.’ And she wagged her finger at Sue the way mothers do.

Up in the trees, the monkeys saw what she did and they wagged their fingers at each other. Monkeys copy what they see people doing.

‘Why do I have to come back before its dark, Mother?’ asked Sue.

The mother said, ‘if you come home when it’s dark, you’ll be afraid.’

‘What’s Fraid, Mother?’ asked Sue.

The mother replied, ‘You will know the meaning of afraid if you come home in the dark’.

Sue went down the road, and the monkeys followed, jumping through the trees. She spent all day playing with the little boy. The monkeys imitated the way they played. But it got dark before Sue realized. When she reached home, her mother scolded her.

‘But mother, I’m not a Fraid,’ said Sue.

‘If you walk about in the dark, you’ll be afraid’, said her mother.

A few days later, Sue went out to play and again she came back home after it got dark. Sue came back home when it was dark, day after day. Finally, her mother decided to teach her a lesson.

One day, it was already dark, and Sue had not come home yet. So, the mother got a large white sheet and hid by the side of the road. One brave monkey who was watching her from the window got a white towel from the house and hid close by the mother because it was copying her.

When Sue came close, her mother put the sheet over her head and made the sheet flap, and she went, 'Whooo! Whooo!' to sound like a ghost. Sue saw this strange thing and thought, 'This must be Fraid!'

But the monkey who was still copying the mother flapped its arms and made noises too.

'Oh, Look behind you!' said Sue, 'There's another Fraid!'

When the mother looked behind she got so afraid that she ran. But, because the monkey was copying her, it ran after her.
