Avery brave younggirl, named Akina, lived in a small village. She was very kind and helpful too. One day a villager saw a huge bear wandering around the woods near the village. This news made the villagers very worried. They thought it would be dangerous if the bear entered the village.

The villagers immediatlyheld a meeting and decided that all the men would take turns to guard the village. Akina was sad as she was eager to get a chance to see the bear. The next night they lit up a bonfire and a man stayed there to guard the village. Akina also quietly kept a watch for the bear. She hid behind a tree. Suddenly the huge bear entered the village. The guard shouted and called for help. A few men came rushing and were ready to chase the bear out.

The bear seemed unwilling to leave and pounced on the villagers. The villagers were struggling to fight the bear. Akina suddenly got an idea, so she looked for a pointed stick. When she found one, she quickly ran and courageously poked the bear's eye with the stick. The bear began to struggle and fell on the ground. After some time the bear ran back into the woods. The villagers rejoiced and Akina became very popular in the village.
